

Outsource Marketing: A Smart Choice for Technology Businesses

Many businesses believe they only have two choices when it comes to marketing -- establish an internal department or contract specific services with a full-service marketing agency. There is a third option worth exploring. Strategic outsource marketing provides the commitment of an internal resource and the capabilities of a full-service agency without the operating costs of either.

Comparing Options

If your firm hires a VP-level marketing executive you can expect to pay upwards of $175,000 in salary and benefits just to start. While your new VP may be able to develop a marketing strategy, your firm will still have to allocate a considerable budget outsourcing projects to creative agencies for tactical execution.

Outsourcing services to a typical full-service agency means you pay for all of their services – even if you don't use them. Operating costs for every department must be absorbed by all the clients.

A strategic outsourcing firm combines the best of both worlds. A dedicated project manager works with you to develop a marketing strategy designed specifically to meet your company's needs. The strategic outsourcing firm then provides your technology company with a full array of marketing expertise under one umbrella to bring your message to an increasingly demanding and hard-to-reach audience.

The key distinction with a strategic outsourcing firm is that you only pay for what you need – when you need it!

Strategic Outsource Marketing Benefits

Scalable Budgets

The first and most critical benefit of strategic marketing outsourcing is a company pays only for the services used for the length of time needed. The marketing team assigned to your firm can be scaled to suit projects of any size and scope.

With an in-house team, you have consistent expenses. With an outsourced marketing department, you only pay for resources when you need them.

Views from the Outside

While an outsourced marketing department takes the time to intimately learn your products, technologies, and customers, its team member do not have years of ingrained company culture. Firm members are not afraid of suggesting radical ideas. Because marketing team members may work on several outsource teams, they often have fresh and objective viewpoints to share.

Why Strategic Outsourced Marketing Makes Sense for Technology Firms

With its attractive advantages, marketing outsourcing might be assumed to be a logical choice for nearly every company looking to grow its business. But certain key characteristics of technology firms make strategic outsource marketing extremely attractive.

One Marketing VP

An Entire Marketing Team

Technology firms must focus on their intellectual property and product lifecycles, and often cannot focus on the latest in marketing tactics. Staying smart in today's volatile business environment requires access to resources well-versed in current practices across all marketing disciplines. Outsourcing the marketing function lets key executives in the firm focus on the core competencies instead of trying to keep up on the latest internet marketing strategy.

Consider Strategic Outsource Marketing for Your Firm Today

Companies that outsource their marketing department can focus on core competencies while a seasoned team of experts handles marketing. Marketing quality and ROI improves across the board as the entire function becomes driven by objectives, strategies, a marketing plan, and budget.
